

THE QUEST FOR A REAL HARD HOB

The Quest for a Real Hard Hob is an original animated film accompanied by a live soundtrack.

The story is set in Berlin at the last moment of humankind. Before her death, one scientist leaves a new power source in the hands of two androids: Deco4 and Edu3. To create a future with any life in it, they must find other survivors before all is lost to a terrifying all-consuming entity.

With performance director Andy Millington on drums and cello, producer Dave Senan plays various electronic instruments while both share vocals. "Making the visuals and music hand in hand enabled us to build a dynamic show that reaches for many different feelings throughout".

Following critically acclaimed shows at the Berlinale 2018 film festival, Krake festivals in Geneva and Berlin and most recently in the Interfilm festival in the Volksbuehne, The Quest for a Real Hard Hob is preparing to go on tour at independent cinemas across Europe. The show will also feature in the coming year at various film and multimedia festivals.

The project was conceived and developed by a group of Irish musicians and artists based in Berlin. All are driven by a desire to push the boundaries of live cinema and are united by a love for music, animation and storytelling.

The intention of the project as a whole is to seek thoughtful reaction from the audience to both the themes within the story and the format of live cinema itself. The increasing prevalence of multimedia projects and events is something that should be embraced and explored to all its potential and the Hard Hob seeks to inspire more artists and musicians to get involved.
